

TEST CASE TRIED IN COURT TO-DAY

Osteopath Physician Charged With Practicing Medicine Without a License.

CLAIMS DRUGS ARE NOT GIVEN

State Board is Back of Prosecution and Case May be Carried to The Supreme Court.

A case which is watched closely by physicians throughout the state was tried in circuit court this morning. It is of unusual interest to the medical profession as it involves the fight which has been in progress for several years between the doctors and osteopaths. The defendant is Dr. George B. Rader, an osteopath in this city, and is charged with practicing medicine without a license contrary to the laws of Indiana. He is the local representative of Dr. John P. Spaulhurst, of Indianapolis, and has been practicing here for several months. Similar cases have been filed in several other counties against the Spaulhurst representatives but the case in this county is one of the first to come to trial.

The jury was completed shortly before noon and the introduction of evidence began after court convened this afternoon. Prosecuting Attorney Noble Hays, who has charge of the case for the state, showed by witnesses that Rader was in the employ of Dr. Spaulhurst and was working under his direction. He tried to prove, however, that the patients do not come under the direct supervision of Dr. Spaulhurst and that the local representatives give the treatment after examination.

The law provides that physicians may have undergraduates as assistants, but that they must not administer medicine without the knowledge of the physician who is required to have a license. The prosecution attempted to show that Dr. Rader was an undergraduate and was therefore permitted by law to give treatment, except under the direct supervision of Dr. Spaulhurst.

The defense claims that the law does not apply to osteopaths as they do not give medicine and are not physicians within the terms of the statute. It is further stated that the local representative work under the direct supervision of Dr. Spaulhurst and that he keeps in touch with the work of each undergraduate. Judge John M. Clark is representing the defendant.

Dr. Rader has attended the school of osteopathy of Kirksville, Mo., and is within six months of graduation. The case is tried for the purpose of testing the law and it is said that it will be carried to the Indiana supreme court by the losing side.

MAKES HIS GET-AWAY

Victor A. Bernard Cannot Be Found By Indianapolis Police.

Victor A. Bernard, said to be "Professor" Keller, cannot be found by the Indianapolis police, according to the information received by the local police department. Particulars were not given but it is believed here that Bernard "jumped" his bond. He was charged with grand larceny there and it is supposed that he left before his trial was called as there has been no report as to what was done with the case.

Bernard was identified by two local men as the clairvoyant who fleeced a number of people in this city with his "magnetizing" game. In every case the gold was magnetized so heavily that it stayed with the medium, and the local people were anxious that he be returned here for trial. It is estimated that Keller left Seymour with at least five hundred dollars taken in during his week's stay in the city.

SUMMER RESORT PLANNED

Would Make Use of the Mineral Well in Brown County.

A summer resort may be established in Brown county, a mile from the Jackson county line, on the land where the sulphur spring was discovered several years ago. The well has a good flow of mineral water which is said to have strong medicinal properties. It was discovered when a Nashville company was drilling for oil.

After the drill had gone down several hundred feet a large pocket of natural gas and the mineral water were discovered. The project was a failure, however, so far as the petroleum was concerned. Wherever the water flows the land is covered with a white coating of sulphur from the water. The well has attracted considerable attention as a hole was cut in the pipe and the water flows from the side. The gas escapes from the top and burns several feet high.

LAWYERS TALK AND FEAST

Eighth Annual Banquet Held at New Lynn Saturday Night.

The eighth annual banquet of the Jackson County Bar Association was held at the New Lynn Hotel Saturday evening. To a lawyer this banquet is prima facie evidence of a good time. It is an occasion when technicalities and legalities are cast aside and all thoughts of writs, indictments, affidavits, complaints and other legal procedure are forgotten.

J. Ross Robertson, president of the association, served as toastmaster and introduced each member who gave an informal toast. A banquet consisting of several courses was served. Attorney-general Thomas M. Honan of Indianapolis, was among the special guests.

Rev. E. C. Wareing, associate editor of the Western Christian Advocate, delivered the Sunday evening sermon at the Methodist church. His text was, "Whom say ye the Son of Man am?" The sermon was scholarly and interesting and was greatly enjoyed by the members. In the morning Dr. F. A. Steele, district superintendent, delivered the sermon.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Himler of Indianapolis, Saturday, Dec. 28, a son. Mrs. Himler was formerly Miss Hazel Hair of this city.

A son was born today to Mr. and Mrs. Carl Reinbolt, south of the city.

HOADLEY'S

TIME ALMOST HERE FOR ACTIVE WORK

Chautauqua Committee Will Begin to Make Final Arrangements in a Few Days.

SALE OF TICKETS IMPORTANT

People Throughout County and in Adjacent Towns Are Interested in Entertainments.

The chautauqua committee will begin active work in a few days towards completing arrangements for the entertainment here next July. After it was decided to give the chautauqua and the contract was made with the Redpath Lyceum Bureau for the talent there was nothing further that could be done until later in the season. However, the time is almost here when additional steps must be taken and the committee is getting ready to launch the campaign.

One of the most important features of the work is the sale of tickets. It is necessary to know as far as possible how much money will be derived from this source, and for that reason the advance ticket sale will be made. The plan for distributing the tickets has not been decided upon, but it is likely that solicitors will be placed in the city to secure the names of all persons who will purchase season tickets. According to the present plan the tickets will not be sold at this time but all persons who desire to assist in the campaign will be asked to sign an agreement that they will take one or more of such tickets. The price will probably be less for a season ticket if purchased within a certain time. This is done so that a better idea can be obtained regarding the seating capacity and the size of the tent needed.

It is not believed that much difficulty will be experienced in selling the tickets as already a large number of persons have asked about them and stated that they wanted to sign for them as soon as the campaign was started. There is considerable interest in the chautauqua outside of the city, and several persons throughout the county will have tickets for sale. They will also be sent to several of the surrounding towns where an interest is shown in the entertainments.

This is the first time that the people of Jackson county have had the advantage of a first class chautauqua and many of them realize the opportunity offered. In no other way can as varied a program of good talent be heard as reasonably as by the chautauqua plan. The entertainments will be held at the city park where a large water proof tent will be erected.

The committee will have an immense amount of work before the entertainments open, but as they have been promised loyal support each member is ready to shoulder the responsibility and do what he can for its success.

Rev. F. M. Huckleberry, who has been quite sick for several days, is considerably better today though still confined to his home. He was unable to preach Sunday and the Baptist pulpit was supplied by Prof. Tilton, of Franklin College.

OBJECTIONS TO NEW ROAD

Complained That it is Not Built According to Specifications.

Objections have been filed to the new road built from the intersection of Seventh and Bill streets to the Seymour and Reddington gravel road, a distance of 4,550 feet, and which has just been completed. It is claimed that the road was not built as wide as the specifications called for and also that the ditches were not constructed as planned by the engineer.

The specifications provide for five two-foot culverts, and it is alleged in the objections that four of them are only twelve inches and the other fifteen inches. It is also provided that the metal shall be rolled with a fifteen ton roller. It is complained that the roller used was only a five ton asphalt roller. Other complaints were also included in the objections.

Exceptions to the objections will be filed by the contractors, it is thought, although no such steps had been taken today. It is said that the petitioners for the road object to the highway because they believe that it is not as good as provided for in the specifications.

BIG CLASS INITIATED

Banquet Followed Meeting of Maccabees Saturday Night.

Seymour Tent No. 33 of the Order of Maccabees held a big meeting at the Armory Hall Saturday night when a large class of candidates received the work. The degrees were conferred by the Shelbyville team regarded as one of the strongest in southern Indiana. This was the largest class taken in by this order for some time. After the conclusion of the work an excellent banquet was served.

Beside the members of the local lodge and the visiting team quite a number of visitors from North Vernon, Columbus, Shelbyville and other towns were present. Among the grand officers present were Grand Commander Milo Meredith, of Crawfordsville, and Great Recorded J. W. Replogh, of Goshen. During the evening a handsome ring was presented to Henry C. Rinne, recorder of the local lodge. The presentation was made by Grand Commander Meredith in appreciation of his services in that capacity.

SPECIAL VENIRE ORDERED.

First Step For the Murder Trial of J. R. Clarke and Henry Romine.

Judge Wickens of the Bartholomew circuit court has ordered a special venire of fifty names from which the jury will be selected for the trial of J. Rufus Clarke and Henry Romine, who are charged with the murder of the McQuaid brothers in Jennings county on the night of October 17. Seba A. Barnes of this city is attorney for the defendants. The case was venued from the Jennings circuit court a few weeks ago.

The case has been set for trial on the first day of the February term of court which is February 3. The trial will be watched with much interest here because the murdered men were well known in Seymour and Jackson county, and one of the defendants, Henry Romine, has a number of acquaintances here. James Tyler, the third man arrested in connection with the case, is held at the North Vernon jail. It is not known when his case will be tried, although many believe that nothing will be done with him until after Romine and Clarke are tried.

SENTENCES PRONOUNCED IN CONSPIRACY CASES

EACH DEFENDANT HAD RAY OF HOPE

Thirty-eight Men Found Guilty of Dynamiting Brought Before Federal Judge Anderson.

QUESTIONS PUT TO FARRELL

New Evidence Obtained by District Attorney Miller Since Close of The Famous Trial.

Indianapolis, December 30.—Shortly before 10 o'clock this morning the thirty-eight prisoners who were found guilty in the dynamite conspiracy case were brought from the Marion county jail to the federal building where sentence was to be pronounced by Judge Anderson. Within the heart of each defendant was a faint ray of hope that he would be saved from a term in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kansas.

United States District Attorney Miller at 10 o'clock moved that the court pronounce judgment on the verdict. Motion for a new trial was filed by C. H. Krum, of St. Louis, for the defense. This motion was overruled by Judge Anderson. Motion in arrest of judgment was filed by the defense and was overruled by the court. There was no argument on either motion.

Following the overruling of a motion for new trial and a motion in arrest of judgment, Judge Anderson asked if any defendant had anything to say as to why judgment should not be pronounced.

The defendants were silent. Judge Anderson asked again. There was silence.

"Do I understand no one desires to say anything?" he asked.

There was no reply, and Judge Anderson called Patrick F. Farrell, of New York, before him. He told him he desired to ask a few questions. He asked Farrell and his attorneys if they had any objections. They had none, and Judge Anderson began to take up Farrell's case.

"Is it a fact you never consented to dynamiting?" asked the judge, after he had questioned Farrell about his membership on the board.

"Yes, sir," said Farrell.

Farrell ceased to be a member of the board in September, 1909. Judge Anderson asked about the depredations in Farrell's district, and about Farrell's work in the organization since that time.

Judge Anderson said since the trial he had been informed that Farrell had been opposed to the administration of the iron workers, and had not been continued on the board for that reason. Mr. Miller said he had not learned that until after the trial had ended.

Any disposition of the case the court may make will be satisfactory to me," said Mr. Miller.

SENTENCE SUSPENDED FOR

Ed Clarke, Used as Government Witness, Pleaded Guilty and Given Suspended Sentence.

(Special to Seymour Republican) Indianapolis, December 30.—After Judge Anderson had questioned several of the defendants in the dynamite conspiracy case he pronounced sentences as follows:

E. A. Clacy, M. J. Young, P. A. Cooley, J. T. Butler, H. S. Lockin, Olaf A. Tveitmo, and John E. Munsey, six years at Leavenworth.

Frank M. Ryan, seven years at Leavenworth.

John H. Barry and Peter J. Smith, four years each.

Charles N. Beum, J. W. Legner, George Anderson, Murray L. Fannell, Edward Smythe, E. C. W. Barry, W. B. Brown, Wm. J. McCain, P. L. Morrin, and Michael Hannon, three years each.

Frank K. Painter, Richard H. Houlihan and Fred Shirman, two years each.

William C. Bernhardt, James Kay, E. C. Phillips, William Shupe, Charles Wachmeister, one year and one day.

Frank J. Higgins, two years.

Frank C. Webb, six years.

Patrick F. Farrell, James Cooney, James Coughlin, Frank Murphy and Hiram K. Kline were given suspended sentences.

Ed Clarke pleaded guilty to the charges against him and was given a suspended sentence.

The suspended sentences were allowed by Judge Anderson upon the motion of the government.

"I do not think the guilt of Farrell is like the guilt of the others. I think if the statute of limitations had been invoked in his behalf it would have been a close question whether his defense would not have been a good one."

Judge Anderson, pointing out that he had never sent to prison a man who he believed should not be punished, directed Farrell to take his seat again. Without pronouncing sentence regarding Farrell, Judge Anderson called James Cooney of Chicago, before him.

Defense's Ground For Appeal.

The lawyers for the defense took numerous exceptions to rulings of the court during the trial, and these were made the basis of the appeal which was taken after the sentences were imposed today. One ground of appeal was that the court erred in permitting the introduction of testimony relating to explosions. The testimony was admitted on the ground that the overt acts of violence were in furtherance of the conspiracy, and though the government could not punish for these overt acts, they were results of the illegal combination and therefore a part of it. The claim by the defense is that this evidence tended to prejudice the jury against the defendants and that the acts were not such a part of the conspiracy as should have gone to the jury at all.

ALBERT B. ANDERSON

Federal Judge Who Imposed Sentence on Convicted Dynamiters.

The district attorney has made it known that all the evidence taken in the trial will be at the command of any state in which explosions have occurred and whose officers may wish to conduct local investigations through the grand juries. There is evidence implicating other men than those on trial here, and it is believed that, were it followed up judiciously, parties connected with local explosions might be brought to justice in the states where they occurred. For instance, several explosions had been arranged in Detroit just at the time of the arrest of the McNamara and McManigal, and the district attorney believes that an investigation there might bear fruit. The same is true in other cities.

The federal authorities are much pleased at the manner in which the testimony of Ortie E. McManigal was received by the jury. Foreman Dare said that the jury accepted every word of it without hesitation and that the corroborative evidence was simply overwhelming. He said the jury looked upon McManigal as a criminal, but this did not prevent them from believing all he had said, and when they retired to discuss the evidence there was not a man on the jury who did not believe that McManigal had made a clean breast of the whole matter, and had made it honestly.

NO PLACE HERE FOR MR. CASTRO

Preparations Made to Turn the Venezuelan Back.

HARD LEGAL BATTLE EXPECTED

Former President and Dictator of Venezuela, Who Is Returning to American Shores, Is Regarded as a Very Wealthy Man, and Immigration Authorities Look For Resistance to Efforts to Prevent His Landing.

New York, Dec. 30.—The moment La Touraine passes quarantine tomorrow morning, General Castro, ex-president and former dictator of Venezuela, will become the guest of the department of commerce and labor. The proper immigration inspector has been appointed to greet Senor Ruiz, as Castro is known aboard ship; a board has been appointed to facilitate his case at that juncture, and the decision has already been reached to have their verdict reviewed and re-reviewed until it goes to Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel for final indorsement. This means that General Castro will remain on board the French liner until she reaches her pier, and then he will be transferred to a barge or a boat which will take him to Ellis Island to await action in his case.

He will occupy first-class accommodations in the government building. It is believed he will occupy the apartments formerly occupied by Prince Pignatelli, who was held up in mistake for an older and more notorious relative who had been expelled from France. He will be allowed counsel, who will be permitted to see him at any hour the island is open; he will be permitted to have visitors, and the newspapers will be accessible to him.

The government, it is learned, will proceed against Castro on two lines. First, there will be an investigation whether his condition of health does not make it undesirable for him to land. Another point will be an inquiry into the desirability of his presence in this country. That may give the Venezuelan government an opportunity to make representations concerning his character, which the secretary make take into consideration.

Castro is regarded as very wealthy, and it is considered certain that he will put up a hard legal battle.

LEFT BATTLESHIP

President Taft Concluding His Trip by Railway.

Key West, Fla., Dec. 30.—The battleship bearing President Taft and his party dropped anchor here Sunday at 10:30. Rosy from his sea trip and smiling at the welcome extended him, the president landed at the naval pier at 11:15.

The president's appearance backed up his statement that he had a very pleasant trip. He also expressed himself as pleased with the way the Panama canal is being pushed to completion, and said it was a wonderful work.

Colonel Goethals accompanied the presidential party from Colon and will go to Washington. His presence is regarded as an indication of the intention to establish a provisional government in the canal zone at an early date. On arriving at the pier the presidential party were driven to the railroad station. President Taft is endeavoring to establish a speed record for the trip from Colon to Washington via Key West, for the purpose of seeing just how quickly the trip may be made. He left on a special train at exactly noon.

Michigan Congressman Breaks Down.

Panama, Dec. 30.—William W. THRILLING TALE OF A DISASTER AT SEA

But Two Survivors of Wreck of Danish Liner.

London, Dec. 30.—With one other survivor, the captain of the Danish liner Volmer, which was wrecked and abandoned during the storm of last week, was brought in here in an open boat that was picked up by a trawler and brought here. The captain said that the first boat was smashed soon after it had been launched and eight persons were drowned. He ordered a second boat launched and seven men entered, leaving him on the bridge. The boat capsized and all clung to the keel. The captain jumped from the bridge and swam to the boat, and, with assistance, succeeding in righting the boat, which he entered. The steamship soon began to sink, and then began a terrible ordeal. The first engineer died of exposure and his body was thrown overboard. The first officer, who had lost his mind, tried to strangle the captain. They lashed him to the thwarts and he died during the night, of exposure. Others died on Dec. 26, and their bodies were thrown overboard, leaving the captain and one other survivor. They had very little food and were without water, suffering terribly from thirst. They caught a little rain in their palms, with which they tried to relieve their awful thirst.

Several steamers passed them, the captain says, but they were too exhausted to hail them. Meanwhile they were almost shoulder deep in water and had abandoned hope when they were rescued.

TWO PERISHED

In the Ruins of Old Governor Bull House in Newport.

Newport, R. I., Dec. 30.—Two persons lost their lives, sixteen families were driven from their homes, ten buildings were completely destroyed, as many more partly damaged and property damage that will probably amount to $300,000 is the result of the most disastrous fire that has ever visited this city, early Sunday.

The persons losing their lives were Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Heath, an aged couple, tenants in the old Governor Bull house, on Spring street, one of those destroyed. Their charred bodies were found near the rear wall of the house. One of the most serious losses to the city as a result of the fire, from an historic point of view, is the destruction of the old Governor Bull house, the oldest house in Rhode Island, which was built in part in 1639 by Henry Bull, governor under the royal charter of the colony of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations. In the years 1685, 1686 and 1690 additions were made to the building.

A Boy and a Gun.

Wabash, Ind., Dec. 30.—Leveling a shotgun at three companions, it is said, and declaring that he would give them three seconds to get out of range, Kenneth Jordan, seventeen years old, pulled both triggers of a shotgun pointed at the fleeing forms of playmates. Dewey Schlemmer, fourteen years old, was seriously wounded, the shot taking effect in both legs. Attending physicians say that the boy will lose both legs. The boys had been on a hunting trip.

Didn't Wear Them Out.

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 30.—General Rosalie Jones, leader of the faithful little band of suffragettes who marched from New York to the state capital to convey a message to Governor Elect William Sulzer, declares that each member of the party is "just as joyful" as when they started their long march in New York city. None suffered from soreness of muscles, she declared, and were good for another walk if necessary.

MANY LETTERS CARRY THREATS

Aftermath of the Stotesbury Entertainments.

MAY BRING SERIES TO AN END

The Lavish Expenditure in Connection With Recent Entertainments Given by Mr. and Mrs. Stotesbury at Philadelphia Has Prompted Many to Make Threats Against Their Lives if Series of Balls Is Continued.

Philadelphia, Dec. 30.—As the result of many letters received by Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, some of them making threats against their lives if they do not cease spending small fortunes on balls and dinners, the series of handsome entertainments by Mrs. Stotesbury may be brought to a sudden end.

Mrs. Stotesbury had planned six balls that would outdo anything ever attempted in Philadelphia. She has given two. After the first one stories were published that the Stotesburys had spent $500,000 upon it. It was given at the Bellevue-Stratford. As a matter of fact the ball did not cost more than $50,000.

Following the second ball, at the Ritz-Carlton, Mrs. Stotesbury began to get threatening letters. Several of them were mailed in the mail section of Philadelphia.

It is known that some of the letters were so violent that friends of the financier and his wife advised that they hire bodyguards. They both laughed at this suggestion, but Mrs. Stotesbury appealed to local editors to keep her name out of the society columns.

IN TROUBLE AGAIN

"Whitey Black" Held as One of Four Suspects in Bank Robbery.

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 30.—Four men alleged to be members of a gang of yeggmen who blew the safe of a bank at Bowling Green, O., three weeks ago, obtaining $4,000, have been arrested here. The prisoners are Albert Peverett, alias "Whitey Black," former leader of the old "Lake Shore" gang; Thomas Kennedy, William Joyce and Jacob Edwards. Peverett served time in the Jackson (Mich.) prison for robbing the Richland (Mich.) bank several years ago. While under fifteen years' sentence he deliberately stuck his arm against a buzz saw and cut off his hand so as to escape manual labor.

PREPARED FOR IT

Double Murderer Admits That He Planned Bloody Deed.

Lagrange, Ind., Dec. 30.—Edward Hart, who shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Rena Hart, from whom he was separated, and her mother, Mrs. Sarah McBride, at the home of the latter here, was captured at the home of his brother, Louis Hart, in Lagrange. He is now a prisoner in the county jail.

Hart, who is thirty years old, admitted to officers that he had borrowed the revolver with the deliberate intent of killing his wife because they could not "get along" together.

Hart has been employed in a livery stable, and had been married but a few months.

Village Suffers Serious Loss.

Williamsport, Ind., Dec. 30.—Fire at Independence, a village in Warren county, burned five storerooms and one residence. Twelve head of horses in a livery barn perished. Loss, $15,000. The origin of the fire is unknown. The five storerooms comprised the main part of the business district.

Deadly Mine Explosion.

Bicknell, Ind., Dec. 30.—Frank Stewart, surveyor of Knox county, was killed and William Pryor, his assistant, was so badly burned that he is not expected to live as the result of an explosion of gas in a mine here. The men had entered the shaft to do some surveying.

Children Killed by Train.

Mishawaka, Ind., Dec. 30.—On their way home from church yesterday Marion and Rosalie Devinter, nine and seven years old, respectively, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Devinter, were instantly killed when caught at a crossing by a Lake Shore & Michigan Southern passenger train.

Intoxicated Man Uses Gun.

Mitchell, Ind., Dec. 30.—While in the Salvation Army chapel, Chief of Police Walker was shot by Gus Goens, who was intoxicated. The injury probably will not prove serious, although Chief Walker will be disabled for some time.

It Wan Not Murder.

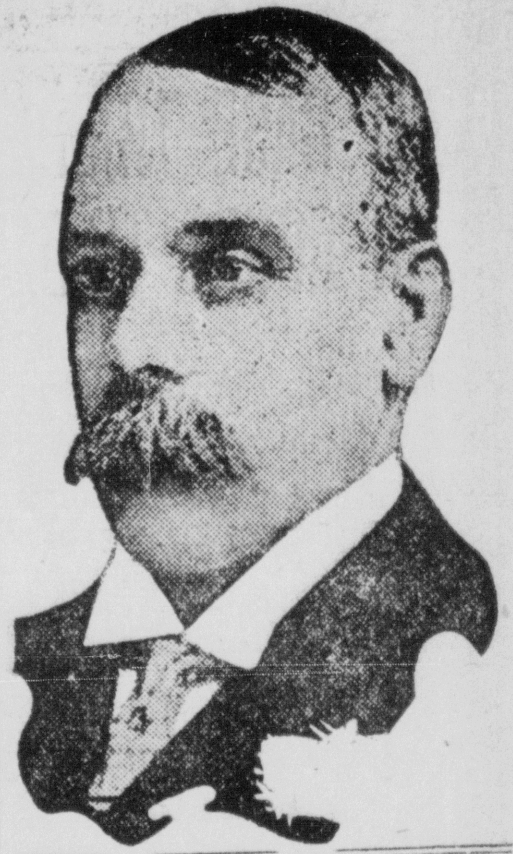

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 30.—Joseph Zwilling, former resident of South Bend, who was found dead in a room at the Y. M. C. A. in Davenport, Ia., committed suicide, according to word received here. Ill health is given as the cause of the act.

Staunton Says Farewell.

Staunton, Va., Dec. 30.—Half of Staunton was at the railroad station Sunday morning to see Governor and Mrs. Wilson away, and the distinguished visitors got an ovation as they boarded the train.

BRITISH WARSHIP'S ARRIVAL AWAITED

The Natal Is Bearing Late Ambassador's Body.

New York, Dec. 30.—Delayed a day by boisterous weather, Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, widow of the late American ambassador to England, and her son, Ogden Mills Reid, arrived last evening by the liner Campania, delayed a day by the liner Campania. Mrs. Reid kept to her suite on the trip, taking her meals there. She said she had had a good rest and that she had completely recovered from the first shock of the ambassador's death. Many wireless messages of condolence were received and answered. She declared that she desired no change in the arrangements for the funeral services.

It is probable that the British armored cruiser Natal, on her way from England with Ambassador Reid's body, may not get here until Thursday. The Campania made efforts to make her by wireless, but was unable to do so. The navy yard wireless also has not been able to reach the Natal. The plan of the navy department is to send the battleships Florida and North Dakota and several destroyers to meet the Natal off Nantucket and escort her to port and anchorage in the Hudson river. The ships will not sail until some wireless word of the Natal's position is received here.

A SPLIT IN SIGHT

Allies Decline to Take Turkish Proposals Seriously.

London, Dec. 30.—Several reports represent the delegates of the allies as extremely nettled over the statements of Rechid Pasha, the leading Turkish delegate to the peace conference. One of these delegates, whose name is not given, is quoted as saying: "We make every allowance for the dilatoriness of the Turks, but these new proposals are a mockery. If they were made seriously they could only have been made with the object of gaining time."

It is very generally believed here that unless the Turks offer something which is nearer the allies' ideas the negotiations are in a fair way of leading to a rupture.

Alleged Poisoners Arrested.

Hot Springs, Ark., Dec. 30.—Charged with having administered poison that caused the death of his wife, Gus Hasselman, forty-two years of age, and Mrs. Ruby Rose, sixteen years of age, sister of the dead woman and wife of Tom Rose, a former vaudeville actor, were arrested at Hasselman's home.

French Coast Storm-Swept.

Paris, Dec. 30.—The great gale continues off the coast without abatement. For the first time in fifty years the lighthouses off Cape Ushant have been extinguished, thus creating a serious situation for navigation. The waves are sixty feet high and are covering the lighthouses.

Killed by His Own Gun.

Marion, Ind., Dec. 30.—Charles Lewis, aged thirty-five, a glass worker, was killed instantly when a shotgun he was cleaning accidentally was discharged. The shot passed above his heart.

THE CLASSIFIED ADS

HELP YOU TO HELP YOURSELF

"Self-help," preached as a creed to the young by economists, is made practicable for everyone by the classified advertising column.

Self-reliant people find themselves able to find buyers for their property or for their chattels—through classified advertising. Efficient workers are able to secure better places, when the needs arise, without disturbing their friends with the news that they are "out of work." Business men find needed help—housewives find household help—the lost is found—through the classified ads.

The classified ads are Salesmen, Peacemakers, Puzzle-solvers, Loss-adjusters, Business-detectives, Task-doers. They are as completely at your service as are the street cars or the telephones—but their capacity for serving you is much wider, while just as available.

The Time to Stop Your Ad is the Day You have Accomplished the Thing You are Advertising For.

Here are a few results obtained by using Classified Ads:

FOUND—Eastern Star Pin. Initials M. G. D. Owner may have same by calling at the Republican Office and paying for this ad.

The "Found" Ads do not find the owner for everything that is advertised in the Classified Column, but they do find over 80 per cent of them. The above Eastern Star Pin was returned to the owner.

LOST—Lady's small watch and fob on Southeastern train or between depot and Teckemeyer's Grocery. Initial "N."

This watch was returned to the owner at a very small cost.

LOST—Putty knife on Second or Walnut streets. Return here.

This advertisement was run just one time in the Classified Column. The knife was returned to the owner at noon the next day.

FOUND—Gold bracelet. Owner may have same by paying for this ad. Phone 205.

This gold bracelet was returned to the owner the first day the ad appeared. If you find anything, bring it to this office and we will insert a "Found" ad and charge it to the owner.

WANTED—Married man to take charge of farm two miles from city. Must have team and implements. Inquire here.

Several parties answered this ad. A good man was secured for the place.

LOST—Gentleman's watch, gun metal case. Return to Star Bakery. Reward.

It cost just the price of two insertions of this ad in the Classified Column to return the above watch to the owner.

FOUND—Gold watch charm, initials, "C. B." Inquire here.

The above property was returned to the owner. Another sample of how easy it is to return what you find to the party who lost it.

FOR SALE—Piano boxes at $1.00 each until Saturday. Come quick. Montenegro-Riehm Music Co., No. 5, E. Second St.

This Ad. sold three piano boxes the first evening it appeared.

FOR SALE—50 feet iron fence. $20.00 if sold at once. Wm. A. Carter.

Although an iron fence is hard to sell, this was sold after a few insertions of the above ad in the Classified Column.

FOUND—Child's bear skin cloth coat, dropped from automobile. Owner can have same by calling at this office and paying for ad.

The above property was returned to the owner.

FOUND—Strayer's "Brief Course in the Teaching Process." Inquire here, paying for adv.

The book was returned to the owner.

LOST—Gold fountain pen with name "Mildred" engraved on it. Return to this office. Reward.

The fountain pen advertised above was a gift to the owner and she regarded it very highly. The cost of having it returned was just one insertion in the Classified Column.

FOR RENT—Six room cottage. Gas and water. 141 South Vine. Frank Spanagel.

The above advertisement appeared just four times, and the house was rented to a responsible tenant.

FOUND—Pink silk bag, containing an ivory fan. Owner may have same by calling here and paying for this ad.

This property was returned to the owner.

FOR SALE—Base burner practically new. Inquire here.

This stove was sold after a few days' advertising.

FOR SALE—Fine organ, cost $200, for $8 if sold at once. John H. Eudaly.

When pianos are so popular, it's a mighty hard job to sell an organ. This one was sold with one insertion of the above ad.

LOST—Bundle containing fancy work, between Bennett's Bazaar and B. & O. depot. Return here.

This merchandise was returned to the owner by using the Classified Column just one time.

FOR SALE—Good delivery wagon. Cheap. Domestic Steam Laundry.

This wagon was sold through the use of the above ad.

LOST—Silver mesh bag. Return here.

The above was returned to the owner.

FOR RENT—Farm. See Geo. L. Hancock.

A good tenant was secured through the use of this advertisement.

WANTED—Man to work and manage farm. Good chance. Give reference. J. H. Matlock, Seymour, Ind.

Twenty men answered this ad. The party who secured the position was at Bloomington at the time the ad appeared. His prompt answer got the position for him.

LOST—Watch fob. Initials "O. F." Return to Ed Fenton.

Mr. Fenton is a strong supporter of the Classified column since the above watch fob was returned to him. Just one day's advertising did it.

WANTED—Girls to do folding at once. Piece work. Daily Republican.

One insertion of this ad brought five girls to this office.

LOST—Gold watch fob, initial "A." Return here and receive reward.

Another proof of honesty. This property was returned to the owner.

IN FASHIONDOM.

The Negligee Has Long Sleeves This Winter.

OF PINK FLANNELETTE.

The trim lines of this pink flannelette room gown and the long coat sleeves give it a smart up to date appearance.

Pink sateen binds the edges, and a pink cord finishes a practical and pretty negligee.

CAMERA APRON.

It is Most Convenient For Carrying Paraphernalia.

The camera apron was devised for the convenient carrying of camera paraphernalia on out of door trips. A yard and a quarter of gray denim were used. The body of the apron was a straight piece twenty-six inches long, with a strip eleven inches deep across the bottom for pockets. The remaining eight inch strip of denim was cut into three pockets, two of which were placed above and one as a patch pocket over the middle of the lower row.

Tape was used for finishing the raw edges of the three pockets and served also for dividing the eleven inch strip into three more pockets. All raw edges were finished with wide white tape stitched twice. A facing of thinner cloth was sewed on top, and drawstrings were run through.

The pockets held plate holders, focus cloth, chamol skin, record book, etc. One upper pocket was lined with chamol skin for the shutter, with bulb and tubing which needed special protection. All pockets closed with a snap at the top, and the whole was folded completely when not in use.

For a man this might be made without drawstrings at the top, and it could be folded and carried by shawl straps.

What Man Understands Woman?

The query, "What woman understands man?" is not proving half so popular as Hughes le Roux's query, "Qui est l'homme qui comprend les femmes?" ("Who is the man who understands women?"), the answers to which are filling the columns of Le Matin of Paris.

Says one wise woman, "A man may understand any woman except the one whom he loves at the age of eighteen." Mme. Saint-Malo says, "The man who understands us is the man who can admire everything in a woman, even her defects."

Another well known authoress asserts, "The man who can understand us is the man who can be our confessor."

One who signs herself Emilie, says: "The man who understands us is the simpleton. He is the man who will recite poetry in our salons and not know how ridiculous he makes himself."

New Peacock Tail Embroidery.

Peacock embroidery has come much to the fore of late, and with some designers it is almost a fetish to introduce the "eye" of a peacock's tail feather into every scheme. There are attractive cushion covers in coarse holland crash, the peacock's tail design being worked in green, blue and gold, which is most effective, while oblongs and squares of this embroidery make charming trays, the bottom being covered with glass. Instead of investing a special tray for this purpose, in itself a usually expensive item, an excellent plan is that of fitting the embroidery like a photograph into an ordinary plain, molded picture frame and fixing two handles on either side, while the back is finished with Japanese silk.

Cooking Hints.

Orange peel dried and grated makes a very fine yellow powder that is delicious flavoring for cakes and puddings. Heat a lemon thoroughly before squeezing it and you will obtain nearly double the quantity of juice that would be obtained if it were not heated.

Rice boiled in milk instead of water has a much richer taste. It must be watched closely while cooking, as it burns quicker when cooked in the milk.

If you rinse a plate with cold water before breaking the eggs on it, add to them a pinch of salt and then stand the eggs where there is a strong current of air you will have no difficulty in beating them to a froth.

TREATMENT FOR TOOLS.

Simple Solution For Keeping Metal Free From Rust.

All iron tools, such as squares, wrenches, pliers, dividers, screwdrivers, etc., have the unwelcome property of rusting. In damp shops the tendency is even more marked, writes P. Edelman in Scientific American. For all such cases as arise with plain iron tools (those not plated or painted) the following treatment will be found to be an efficient preventive measure:

Obtain some potassium bichromate (5 or 10 cents' worth will be sufficient for a gallon of solution) and some sodium hydroxide (lye). The water used as a solvent should be distilled and warm or hot if possible. To a gallon of water add about one or two tablespoonfuls of the hydroxide, and after it is dissolved add the bichromate. Make the solution saturated—i. e., put in as much of the bichromate as will dissolve. Since the crystals do not dissolve very fast, the solution should be stirred.

Now clean the tools, utensils or the like which are to be treated. They should be smoothed and polished if possible. Sandpaper or emery paper or cloth will be found serviceable for this purpose. Then submerge the tools in the solution. When several pieces are treated at the same time they should not touch or interfere with one another. The treatment should last as long as possible. This may be for one, two or more days or even for several weeks. The tools may be taken out of the solution and used as needed and then reinserted in the solution. In such case care should be taken to keep the tools clean or else to reclean them.

Some tools, such as screwdrivers, squares, dividers, etc., can be left in the solution continually, day in and day out, and be taken from the solution as needed. This method will keep them bright indefinitely. If the solution evaporates it can be replaced with more water or bichromate and lye as needed. Ordinary tools can be washed and wiped with a cloth after treatment without destroying the nonrusting effect. This treatment should be very valuable about the shop, and since it does not injure the tool in any way it is applicable to fine tools as well as the common ones. The action is due to the combined influence of the hydroxide and bichromate, which tends to inhibit and prevent the iron from corroding. The effect wears off in time, of course, but it can be renewed by a further treatment. In fact, occasional treatment at given intervals should render the tools practically permanently immune.

Effect of Paint on Iron Corrosion.

According to the rather surprising results obtained by two German chemists, M. Liebreich and L. Spitzer, who were experimenting with paint as a preventive of the corrosion of iron, it seems one coat of good paint or varnish is much superior to two or more coats. In their experiments a second or third coat proved absolutely detrimental. The experiments consisted in painting well polished steel bars with one or more coats and suspending the bars over boiling water for four days. Half of the coating was then removed and the bare metal well covered with vaseline to prevent oxidation. In each case where only one coat of paint had been applied the bars remained as brilliant and rust free as before the test, but in the case of two or more coats corrosion had taken place. The investigators will not commit themselves as to the explanation of this, but it may be that a coating of several layers provides a less flexible cover, more liable to crack, thus allowing oxidizing agents to penetrate to the metal surface.

Copper of the Ancients.

It is commonly supposed that the ancients succeeded in hardening copper. In fact, says the Scientific American. Metallurgists who have examined specimens of this so called hardened copper have found that it is not pure copper, but usually an alloy of copper, either natural—that is, the two metals existed in one ore, so that in the process of reduction an alloy was formed—or an artificial alloy made by melting two ores together, the one copper and the other zinc. The so called money metal, now a regular product of an eastern copper refinery, is the modern equivalent of the ancient natural alloy, a compound of copper and nickel obtained by reducing the copper nickel ores of the Sudbury mines in Ontario. All the arrowheads and other implements which have been found in the Sudbury district are made of this native copper-nickel, hardened only by hammering.

The Snail and the Screw.

As evidencing the fact that for the most part human inventions have been suggested by natural objects, it has been pointed out that there is an interesting parallel between the shell of the snail and the ordinary screw. It is thought that the idea of the screw was suggested by the spiral shell of the edible snail. It was not the shape of the shell that suggested the screw, but the spiral motion which it is necessary to give to the body of the snail in order to withdraw it from the shell. This at once showed that an object of a screw shape imbedded in a solid powerfully resisted attempts to withdraw it by a straight pull.—Harper's.

Dirty Bottled Water.

If you want to know whether your bottled water came originally from a clean source, has been put into clean bottles and has been handled with decent care pour out a glassful and hold it up to the light. Focus your eyes on it carefully for a minute and watch. If you see a myriad of tiny particles which look like the dust specks in a sunbeam you may be sure the water is dirty, and, though it may not be dangerous, it ought not to bring the price of pure bottled water.—New York American.

Home Economics Short Course.

Indiana women will take an important part in the program of the Purdue Farmers' Short Course. While the men are judging corn and live stock, and listening to discussion on soils, fruit, crops and many other subjects, the women will take up work with foods, clothing, home sanitation and better social conditions in the country. Prof. Mary Matthews, head of the Home Economics Department, says, "Indiana women are realizing their problems more and more and are taking active steps to better conditions. At the Purdue Short Course, January 13-18, it is hoped that a state-wide movement for better social and home life in the country will be put in motion. The domestic science courses just completed in southern Indiana, have demonstrated that the women wish help from Purdue. More than 1500 women attended the demonstrations at the six courses just held, and in every case have formed a strong organization for the regular study of Home Economics subjects during the year." Present indications are that several hundred women will attend the course at Purdue. Miss Matthews will be assisted by Mrs. Virginia Meredith of Cambridge City, and Mrs. Julia Fried Walker of Indianapolis. These women have an important message for the women of the state and will prove great attractions.

Miss Alma Garvin and Miss Roberta McNeill, Purdue Extension workers, who are giving lectures and demonstrations throughout the state, will give work each day of the course. Miss Amy Howe, assistant in the Home Economics Department, will also assist in the textile work. Indiana women are urged to send for complete program and to arrange to attend Purdue during Short Course week.

SOCIAL EVENTS.

BRUENGER-STANFIELD.

One of the most beautiful weddings of the season occurred Sunday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Marguerite Bruenger when her daughter, Miss Albertina, was united in marriage to Mr. Owen T. Stanfield.

Promptly at two o'clock Miss Elsie Conradi began playing Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus while the bridal party took their places before an altar artistically arranged with ferns and festoons of smilax, from which hung a white wedding bell. The Rev. H. R. Boock of the St. Paul's Evangelical church, performed the ceremony. The ring ceremony was used, during which Miss Conradi played Hearts and Flowers.

The bride looked beautiful in a gown of white ivory satin, hand-embroidered. Her tulle veil was arranged with a Juliet cap effect of lilies of the valley. She carried a lovely bouquet of bride's roses with a shower bouquet of white hyacinths tied with tulle. Miss Alice Stanfield acted as maid of honor. Her gown was of pink crepe-de-chine and she carried a shower bouquet of pink carnations and smilax. Miss Stella Laupus, bride's maid, was dressed in pale blue silk mull trimmed with pink rose buds. She also carried a large bouquet of pink carnations and smilax. Little Howard Hauersperger, nephew of the bride, was flower carrier and was dressed in a white suit carrying a French basket of pink and white carnations. Mr. Bernard Sonnenberg, of Cincinnati, acted as best man.

The bride is a highly esteemed young lady and has a wide circle of friends with whom she is very popular.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Stanfield and is a very popular young man. He is engaged in the lumber business at Norwood, La.

After the ceremony elegant refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Stanfield have the congratulations and best wishes of a host of friends. In a few weeks they will leave for a honeymoon trip in the south and will be at home after Jan. 20, 1913 in their new home at Norwood, La.

MILBURN-HENDERSON.

Mr. Ray Earl Milburn and Miss Hazel Henderson were married Saturday evening by Rev. F. M. Huckleberry at his home on East Laurel street.

Mr. Milburn is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Milburn and is a traveling salesman. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Henderson.

Both are popular young people. They will reside here.

DINNER PARTY.

Miss Anna E. Carter entertained several friends with a dinner party Sunday at her home on North Ewing street. Covers were laid for the Misses Leona Lail, of Greenwood, Marie Boas of Vallonia, and Mr. Emmett Cobb, of Edinburg, and Harry Shane, of Columbus.

CORDES-TRIMPE.

Frank E. Cordes and Miss Emma Trimpe a popular young couple of Cortland were married this morning by Rev. H. R. Boock at the parsonage of the St. Paul church. They were accompanied here by Miss Emma Herkamp and William Cordes. They will reside on a farm near Cortland.

Why Farmers Like to Sell Veal.

The following is taken from the current issue of Farm and Fireside:

"The high cost of living is usually exemplified by the price of sirloin steak. There seems to be a widespread popular notion that a good steer consists of seventeen hundred pounds of sirloin, encased in a valuable hide, and that the farmer gets thirty-five cents a pound for him.

"Other people insist that the high price of beef is accounted for by the slaughter of calves.

"To those who like to figure these things out, and they are very important things to all of us, let us suppose that we have a calf and by feeding him for five weeks on whole milk to the value of six dollars can sell him for $18 as veal. This leaves a profit on the veal, not counting labor, of $12.

"Now let us see what we should make if we let him become a steer, from which could be cut the baby-beef sirloin that makes living high. We will take $26 as the cost of his feed the first year, and $52 for the second year. As a two-year-old weighing 1,200 pounds, he will 'stand us' $78 and bring, say, $96. Here is a profit of $18 on the two-year-old and of $12 on the veal. The farmer will have had the pleasure of the animal's society for two years, and $6 more than he could have taken for the calf."

Jay C. Smith went to Franklin this morning to attend a meeting of the State Mission Board.

Everybody Who Used Great Kidney Remedy Obtained Fine Results.

At the time I commenced using your Swamp-Root I was so bad that I had to give up work. The pains in my back would be like some sharp instrument piercing my kidneys and I could hardly get out of a chair without help. I finally resolved to give your Swamp-Root a trial and the results were so fine that I have recommended it to others and it seems to produce the same beneficial results with everybody that uses it. I am very thankful to you for your great remedy, Swamp-Root, as I know that it will do all you claim for it.

S. D. A. Conference.

Church elders and deacons of practically every one of the 69 churches in the Indiana Conference of Seventh Day Adventists will join with the ordained and licensed ministers, Bible teachers, and missionary colporters in holding a convention at the Twenty-third Street church of that denomination, January 3rd to 7th. In addition to all the ministerial workers in the conference being present, the Lake Union Conference, which includes the state conferences in Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, and Indiana, will be represented by President Allen Moon, of South Bend; W. T. Knox, vice-president of the General Conference, will attend from the headquarters of the denomination in Washington, D. C., and C. F. McVaugh, president of the West Michigan Conference is also expected. Mrs. Mary L. Patrick, of North Pine street, is expected to go from the Seymour church.

Move On Now!

says a policeman to a street crowd, and whacks heads if it don't. "Move on now," says the big, harsh pills to bowel congestion and suffering follows. The Word "Widow."

As a word "widow" is most interesting. Max Mueller traced it back through thousands of years with hardly any change of form or meaning. "The word at its original formation meant simply a woman left without a man, just as it does today, and it has remained all these ages materially unchanged both in sound and meaning." A thousand years ago the Anglo-Saxons used the word in England and north Germany. The Meso-Goths and earlier than they, the Latin people knew it centuries before the Anglo-Saxons, and the Sanskrit records show that a thousand years before Latin was written the same word was spoken on the slopes of the Himalayas.

A Fool's Identity.

Some of the best known people pass unrecognized by those to whom they should be known. Harold Frederick sat one night at dinner next a man whose very silence and taciturnity caused him the more closely covertly to survey him. Not a word was exchanged between the two. "Who was that hopeless idiot that I sat next to at dinner?" asked Frederick at the close of the meal. "That hopeless idiot was Cecil Rhodes," he was answered. It was the fact. The Colossus had been in one of the moods in which he would not talk, and Frederick, though he had seen his portrait a hundred times, had not recognized him.—St. James' Gazette

As the Maid Saw It.

In her book, "Thirteen Years of a Busy Life," Mrs. Alex. Tweedie tells this story on herself:

Before she started on a journey from New York to Mexico she packed away her jewelry, including her rings and watch chain. Her maid was sitting opposite her in the train, and suddenly she noticed they were missing.

"Oh," she exclaimed, in a sudden panic, "where are your rings?"

"I put them away," Mrs. Tweedie replied. "I never travel off the beaten track wearing jewelry of any kind."

"Oh, dear, what a pity!" commented the maid. "They make you look such a lady!"

The Scrap Book

The Impression He Gave.
The learned English jurist, Judge Willis, was a very democratic and genial sort of a man. On one occasion going home in an omnibus which landed him at an inn known as the Green Man, he as usual passed the time in friendly discourse with the passengers. To one housewife who had been marketing he delivered a well meant lecture on the purchasing power of money, the tariff, free trade and domestic and political economy. To other passengers he talked freely and dispensed counsel and advice indiscriminately. Arrived at his destination, he intimated to the conductor, "I want to get out at the Green Man." Accordingly the omnibus slowed down, but as he was leaving his seat a lady touched him on the sleeve and earnestly inquired, "My good man, don't you think you've had enough?"

The Humble Hero.
He was not of the royal blood,
He did not seem to know his worth,
But in our common brotherhood
He was a hero of the earth.

God gave him grace to work and wait
And strength and patience to endure
And faith and hope which, soon or late,
A crown of triumph would insure.

He looked not to the heights for fame
Nor walked where wild ambition leads,
Content on earth to breathe his name
With kind and helpful little deeds.

The world seemed brighter for his smile,
And hearts were glad to have him near,
Broadening life's nobler scope the while
He moved within his humble sphere.
—Joseph W. Humphries.

Clear Case of Madness.
John Blank of Ohio is a politician of considerable influence in his state. One evening when he was in Washington he was invited to dine at the home of John R. McLean, who dabbles in Ohio politics and costly tapestries.

Every time Mr. McLean hears of a tapestry sale in Europe he peels off a section of his bank roll, hands it to an agent and tells him to blow it in on the hangings.

Blank's appetite was very poor that night. Apparently he was in great physical pain or felt the gnawing clutch of a secret sorrow. When he got back to Ohio he made this mournful announcement:

"I've always heard that John R. McLean was a wise old guy. It's a mistake. That old fellow is as crazy as a loon. He took me in to dinner in a room where there was absolutely nothing on the floor and all the carpets were hanging on the wall."—Popular Magazine.

Well Confirmed.
The Rev. Joshua Kimber, in his reminiscences in the Living Church, tells the following anecdote of the late Bishop Horatio Porter: "He had been journeying up the east bank of the Hudson river, stopping for confirmation each day at adjoining parishes. When he reached Poughkeepsie he saw a woman at the rail waiting for confirmation whose face he was sure he recognized and was somewhat familiar with. He was also certain that she had been confirmed within the week at another place. The bishop whispered to her to remain after service and said: 'My dear madam, what do you mean by coming for confirmation? I am sure I confirmed you Monday at such a place. Did I not?' She said: 'You certainly did. I have been following you up the river and have been confirmed every day this week.' He, astonished, said, 'Why did you do that? Whereupon she replied, 'Because I heard it was good for rheumatism.'"

Reeves and Toole.
Sims Reeves told this story in his "Reminiscences":

"I was playing the part of Tom Tug in company with my excellent friend J. L. Toole, who was also a member of the cast. In 'The Waterman' a word or two of gag is held to be permissible, and, partly to amuse the audience, partly to astonish my excellent fellow actor, I said to him in a certain scene in reply to his question:

"What's the meaning of all this?"
"The meaning of it is that you've been made a fool of, and I'm a happy fellow."

"Johnnie looked very much surprised, and, as a popular comedian does not if he can help it allow himself to be scored off, after a moment's reflection, during which he must have suffered the keenest agony, replied:

"So it sims."

Fierce Cheese Eaters.

A noted writer was aboard a steamship at Montreal and just before the vessel left on her trip for Liverpool was watching the loading of an enormous quantity of Canadian cheese. A number of schoolteachers were on the boat bound for Quebec, and these young ladies were very much interested in the loading of the cheeses. One of them asked the writer how many there were.

"The ship takes on from 15,000 to 25,000 cheeses every trip," he truthfully informed her.

"How—how many people are there on board?" she asked.

"About 1,200 this trip."

For a moment the young lady regarded him in astonishment; then she looked at the cheeses being loaded by the hundred.

"It's truly wonderful," she gasped. "I never would have believed it if I had not seen them with my own two eyes. And only 1,200 people! Goodness me, they must be fierce cheese eaters!"—Judge.

SNUBBED THE KING.

But George of Greece Saw the Humor of the Situation.

An amusing story is being told of King George of Greece; one of the combatants in the war of the Balkan states.

When he goes to Aix-les-Bains, his favorite holiday resort in France, he very often visits the casino in the evenings. On these occasions one of the hotel omnibuses is sent for his private use, and in this he always drives back to the hotel. One evening a lady who was leaving the casino immediately in front of him stepped into the omnibus. The king's equerry made a motion as if to prevent her, but the king stopped him.

"Never mind," he said; "she's not in the way."

The lady, having noticed the attempt to stop her progress and overhearing the king's remark, glared haughtily at the two men, elevated her shapely eyebrows and tilted her pretty nose rather high in the air as the two gentlemen took their seats.

The omnibus started, and after a minute or two the king addressed some

MADE A MOTION AS IF TO PREVENT HER remark to his equerry. The latter replied, using the term "Your majesty" rather more emphatically than usual. The lady suddenly realized who they were and, banging on the door, tried to attract the driver's attention, apparently with the idea of making a hurried exit.

"Oh, what have I done?" she wailed. "Heavens, what have I done? Stop, stop! Let me out!"
"Calm yourself, madam, I entreat you," King George said reassuringly. "Even a king is not an epidemic disease!"

An Art Aristocrat.

In "German Memories" Sidney White man tells these delightful stories of Lenbach, the famous portrait painter:

Once when asked his price for a portrait Lenbach answered: "That all depends; from 20,000 marks, which I may ask, down to 5,000, which I may be willing to pay for the privilege of painting an exceptionally interesting face."

If he did not want to undertake a commission Lenbach would quote an extravagant price as a simple way out. This happened in the case of a Berlin banker. "But surely that is too much," said the close fistled millionaire. "I bought a portrait which you painted of Prince Bismarck for less than half that price." "That may be," replied Lenbach quietly. "It was a pleasure for me to portray him. But surely, Herr X., without offense, you do not imagine that it would be an equal pleasure to me to paint you?"

Retribution.

A young woman went into a city restaurant for her lunch, but after a glance at the tablecloths and a sniff of the close air she decided to eat elsewhere and started to go out. The proprietor thought that she was leaving without paying for a meal and stopped her. In order to avoid hurting his feelings the girl said:

"I find that I have forgotten my pocketbook, so I can't eat here now." She was hurrying away, but the proprietor was kind hearted.

"My dear girl," he said, "you sit right down and eat! No young woman is going out of my place hungry because she hasn't her money with her. You eat now, and tomorrow you can come in and pay me."

The young woman sat miserably down and tried to eat, and as she left, hiding her pocketbook, she mused: "That's what I get for fibbing! And to think that I must come here again tomorrow too!"—Woman's Home Companion.

They Didn't Need the Water.

"In the days of the old volunteer fire department there was more quenching of thirst than quenching of conflagrations," said Fire Chief Kenlon of New York.

"The volunteer firemen, I'm afraid, were a sad lot of rolsters. There's a story they tell about a fire back in 1893.

"It was a fire at an outlying farm, and when the firemen arrived with engine and hose the buildings were pretty well destroyed.

"The farmer met them at the gate. He said bitterly:

"No use yer comin' in, boys. There hain't a drop o' water within two miles of us."

"But the firemen, mindful of the usual merry-making that accompanied any fire, pushed right on with their apparatus.

"Oh, that's all right," they said heartily. "We don't mind drinking it straight."—Boston Herald.

Three Future White House Maids Have Fine Talents

Margaret Wilson Is Singer. Other Two Are Artists of Much Ability.

Mrs. Wilson, New Mistress of White House, Now Has "Official" Portrait.

PROBABLY no three girls in America will be so much in the public eye during the next four years as the three daughters of the president elect, Woodrow Wilson. As daughters of the president of the United States they will be the cynosure of all eyes in Washington, and their daily doings will be chronicled throughout the length and breadth of the land.

Through a piece of fine photography Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the president elect, now has an "official" photograph. The portrait is one of the latest for which she has posed and because of its excellence is looked upon by both Mr. and Mrs. Wilson as the one which should properly be used henceforth for reproduction. Mrs. Wilson, by the way, for some time to come will be a figure upon which the eyes of Washington and national social circles will be centered. Many responsibilities of a social nature devolve upon her as mistress of the White House.

The three daughters are Margaret, Jessie Woodrow and Eleanor Randolph. Margaret, the eldest, is the possessor of a rich soprano voice, which has been cultivated under Mrs. Gillespie, a New York teacher. She is a "bachelor maid" in Manhattan for several days a week, but after next March she will, of course, make her home in Washington.

Jessie Woodrow Wilson, the second daughter, is named for her Scotch grandmother and her father. She is an artist of ability, but her whole ambition lies in sociological work, and until recently she devoted from three to four days a week at the Light house, Philadelphia, a church settlement. She is of a spirituelle order of beauty and possesses all the enthusiasm of a modern Joan of Arc.

Miss Jessie Wilson is perhaps the most brilliant of the president elect's three daughters, though all of them are extremely clever girls. She was graduated from the Woman's college in Baltimore.

There have been fourteen White House brides, but only ten of them have been married in that historic mansion. The first to be married there was Anna Todd, a niece of the famous Dolly Madison, whose wedding took place in the east room in the year 1811, when she became the wife of John G. Jackson, congressman from Virginia.

The last to enter the holy bonds of matrimony within the confines of the president's home was Miss Alice Roosevelt, who became the wife of Nicholas Longworth, congressman from Ohio, in 1906.

Four White House brides have been married during the period of their father's administration as president. Those brides were Maria Monroe, Elizabeth Tyler, Nellie Grant and Alice Roosevelt.

Under the capable guidance of their mother the president's daughters are expected to be socially the pride of diplomatic circles. Although the young women have thoroughly formed interests along the lines of their talent, they will have big social responsibilities.

Eleanor Wilson has had such well known artists as Childe Hassam, Edward Rook, Willard Metcalfe and Walter Griffin for her associates.

Up to the time they were twelve years old the three Wilson girls were entirely educated at home. Mrs. Wilson is a strong believer in family influence, and so she took personal charge of their early education. Even when they were little tots of five and six she used to read to them every day classic English literature, including the works of the best English authors, the Iliad, the Odyssey and translations of the older classics. She felt that if they were to acquire a proper appreciation of literature they could not begin too early. Mrs. Wilson was always a great reader. She used to pass whole days in her father's and grandfather's libraries, and her three daughters have inherited her fondness for books.

MISS ELEANOR RANDOLPH WILSON.

But in spite of this fondness for books the girls are fond of outdoor sports. Miss Jessie Wilson is an exceptionally good tennis player, and all three ride horseback. They are strong, well developed American girls, healthy both in mind and body and essentially feminine.

An interesting little story arises concerning the Wilson girls from the fact that should all of them marry while their father is president one of them must be the "unlucky thirteenth" White House bride unless a double wedding can be arranged.

There have been fourteen White House brides, but only ten of them have been married in that historic

THE LIVING ROOM.

An Artistic Decorative Treatment For This Apartment.

While a certain simplicity should be maintained in living room furnishings, as in the rest of the rooms in the house, there is more liberty for the use of pictures and other ornamentation. For this reason a plain wall covering is preferable. It will be a better background for pictures and for everything in the room. The overdraperies may be of figured material, but not too strong or brilliant in design. The use of rich design and coloring in the furniture coverings and such accessories as the table covers and pillows is always effective. Here strong contrasts may often be used to the advantage of the whole room.

EMBROIDERED MUSLIN MAKES THIS HANGING.

Care should be exercised to avoid the use of too many warm colors or too many cold colors together. In a room that is mostly green or blue or gray it is necessary to introduce warm bits of red, yellow or orange in the pillows or coverings to "bring the room together" and avoid monotony. A single brilliantly covered pillow or table mat will sometimes accomplish this in a room that is otherwise oppressively "gray." The warm colors always dominate the colder, less assertive ones. For this reason if the wall coverings and draperies are warm in color a great deal of soft green, blue or gray must be used to obtain any contrasting effect.

In the cut is shown a simple but effective window drapery for the living room of embroidered muslin. The long curtains hang to the sill and are pushed back to display the sash drapery of the same embroidered muslin.

FOR THE HOME NURSE.

Ways and Means of Keeping the Young Convalescent Amused.

During a long convalescence it is very necessary to keep the patient's thought away from herself and with the wider world of affairs and men. This is true whether the patient is child or adult. One little girl, who was confined to her room for months, dressed dolls for a children's hospital. When one was completed her mother took it to the hospital and gave it personally to some child, coming home to relate the whole "wonderful experience" to her own little invalid.

The trained nurse who was with them taught the child how to bandage, how to give a bath and take a temperature, taking pains to explain to her why things were done. This not only made her willing to be cared for, but sowed in her mind the rudiments of nursing and encouraged the interest that has since made her a wonderful nurse.

Another girl made all sorts of dolls' hats, her favorite one being a "mushroom shape," fashioned from an orange peel and trimmed with quids of the reverse side of the same material. The only way for her to obtain the hat material was to eat the orange—a method of forcing the appetite that is always permissible in sickness. A near rival to this was one made of half an eggshell, the trimming painted on.

The making of paper flowers, little May baskets or valentines will appeal to some children, while pasting the old fashioned scrap book is an obsolete joy that the child convalescent loves.

Scissors in the Kitchen.

A pair of scissors are of great help in the kitchen, yet few housewives will buy them on purpose to hang among the strainers and slicers and all the other shining artillery in which they take pride. A dull pair, black with age or with the points missing, or the garden pair may usually be found, but these will not fulfill all the functions which may be delegated to shining new ones.

In preparing vegetables they are in comparable. Try them in cutting the roots from spinach, trimming rusty lettuce leaves, shaping flowerlets of cauliflower and cutting up asparagus. Fish may be trimmed ready for cooking to the minimum of time by their aid.

Don't Lay Hairpins on Top of Telephone.

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside a telephone expert, writing an article on the construction and use of telephones in rural districts, says:

"Don't use the instrument for a shelf and above all don't put hairpins or other metals on top of it. I have more than once driven a long road in winter to pick a hairpin or a handful of hair pins off an instrument which they were not circulating out of business."

FATHER TIME IN THE PICTURE

At Midnight Play or Sing the National Hymn and Raise the American Flag, Then Distribute Favors From the Tree to Each Guest.

It will be very easy to plan a unique and pretty party on New Year's eve. The Japanese and Chinese make much of their New Year's festival, so you will strike a popular note by having all your decorations Chinese. Use red lights, big chrysanthemums in vases, and to carry the pretty effect still further you yourself and your guests wear Chinese costume.

For your dinner have favors of tiny Chinese lanterns filled with candles, tiny fans or umbrellas. In place of the Christmas tree decorations trim the tree well with Chinese snapping mottoes and tiny Chinese favors. Have it well lighted with candles and it will be fully as pretty as on Christmas eve.

The mottoes, etc., may be bought at a moderate cost at any shop making a specialty of favors for parties. Write a New Year's greeting for each guest on red paper with gilt letters, writing the words vertically instead of horizontally. The snapping mottoes make a grand substitute for fireworks. If more noise is desired just buy some German crickets for the men and sleigh bell rattles for the women and hang one for each guest on the tree.

At midnight play or sing the national hymn and raise an American flag, then distribute the favors from the tree.

It adds to the pretty picture to have some one dressed as Time, with white hair and beard and hourglass and scythe, with a basket woven of evergreens and filled with tiny calendars and diaries, one for each guest. Let the little girls of different sizes, as the seasons, hand out these favors—spring, with a wreath of jonquils or other spring flower; summer, with roses; autumn, with chrysanthemums, and winter, with holly.

For your dinner serve:
Oyster Soup. Crackers. Celery.
Tiny Sweet Pickles.
Deviled Crabs in Shells.
Sliced Cucumbers.
Roast Beef. Potatoes, Browned.
Stewed Corn. Hot Rolls.
Lemon Sherbet.
Empress Salad. Cheese Straws.
Olives.
Ice Cream. Cake.
Coffee.

RODS FOR BATHROOM.

They Come in All Sizes to Fit Any Apartment.

The housekeeper who is in need of new bathroom fixings will be interested in the three quarter glass towel rods which have just come out. In a small bathroom, where all the furnishings must be as small as possible, even the size of the towel rod counts. The brackets of these new rods are nickel plated on brass, which prevents them from rusting. They come in many sizes, the shortest being fifteen inches long and the longest forty-eight inches, so any woman ought to find one of the proper size to fit her bathroom.

The corner rod is another good one for a tiny room, as the bracket of this style rod is shaped so that it can be screwed into a corner. This type of rod comes from fifteen to twenty-four inches in length.

A trio of small rods only five-eighths of an inch wide are fitted to one bracket and will be found very convenient, as on these can be hung all the necessary towels as well as wash cloths. Little sets for holding soap, tumbler and six toothbrushes come in this ware and are intended for either a small or large bathroom. A neat little tumbler designed especially for a small room has a round nickel piece below through which six toothbrushes may be slipped.

New Feature in Sweaters.

Yoke effects are just now the fad on every type of costume, from nightgowns to theater wraps, and winter sweaters, falling into line, are also fashioned with yokes at the top.

The green buttons on this sweater give a snappy touch, and the white hat emphasizes the contrast of color.

To Clean Felt Hats.

When the felt hat is soiled it may be cleaned by dipping a hard brush into spirits of ammonia and scrubbing the hat until it is clean.

The brush used should have short bristles.

CHAPTER IV.

The Attack.

Slightly more than sixty miles, as the route ran, stretched between old Fort Dodge and the ford crossing the Arkansas leading down to the Cimarron; another sixty miles distant, across a desert of alkali and sand, lay Devere. The main Santa Fe trail, broad and deeply rutted by the innumerable wheels of early spring caravans, followed the general course of the river, occasionally touching the higher level plains, but mostly keeping close beneath the protection of the northern bluffs, or else skirting the edge of the water. Night or day the route was easily followed, and, in other years, the traveler was seldom for long out of sight of tolling wagons. Now scarcely a wheel turned in all that lonely distance.

The west-bound stage left the station at Deer Creek at four o'clock in the afternoon with no intimation of danger ahead. Its occupants had eaten dinner in company with those of the east-bound coach, eighteen miles down the river at Canon Bluff, and the incoming driver had reported an open road, and no unusual trouble. No Indian signs had been observed, not even signal fires during the night, and the conductor, who had come straight from Santa Fe, reported that troops from Fort Union had driven the only known bunch of raiders back from the neighborhood of the trail, and had them already safely corralled in the mountains. This report, seemingly authentic and official, served to relax the nerves, and the west-bound driver sang to himself as he guided the four horses forward, while the conductor, a sawed-off gun planted between his knees, nodded drowsily. Inside there were but three passengers, jerking back and forth, as the wheels struck the deep ruts of the trail, occasionally exchanging a word or two, but usually staring gloomily forth at the monotonous scene. Miss McDonald and Moylan occupied the back seat, some baggage wedged tightly between to keep them more secure on the slippery cushion, while facing them, and clinging to his support with both hands, was a pock-marked Mexican, with rather villainous face and ornate dress, and excessively polite manners. He had joined the little party at Dodge, smiling happily at sight of Miss Molly's face when she unveiled, although his small knowledge of English prevented any extended effort at conversation. Moylan, however, after careful scrutiny, engaged him shortly in Spanish, and later explained to the girl, in low tones, that the man was a Santa Fe gambler known as Gonzales, with a reputation to be hinted at but not openly discussed.

They were some six miles to the west of Deer Creek, the horses still moving with spirit, the driver's foot on the brake, when the stage took a sudden plunge down a sloping bank where the valley perceptibly narrowed. To the left, beyond a flat expanse of brown, sun-scorched grass, flowed the widely-spreading waters of the Arkansas, barely covering the treacherous sandy bottom, and from the other side came the more distant gleam of alkali plains; to the right arose the bluffs, here both steep and rugged, completely shutting off the view, barren of vegetation except for a few scattered patches of grass. Suddenly a man rode out of a rift in the bank, directly in front, and held up his hand. Surprised, startled, the driver instantaneously clamped on his brake, and brought his horses to a quick stop; the conductor, nearly flung from his seat, yanked his gun forward.

"None of that now," called out the man in saddle quickly, both hands uplifted to show their emptiness. "This is no hold-up. I've got news."

He spurred his pony forward slowly, the animal seemingly barely able to move, and swung out of the saddle beside the front wheel, staggering a bit as though his limbs were cramped as his feet felt the ground.

"I'm from Fort Union," he said, "Seventh Cavalry, sent through by way of Cimarron Springs. There is hell to pay west of here; the stations at Arkansas Crossing and Low Water were burned last night."

"The devil you say," burst out the driver hoarsely, his startled eyes sweeping the horizon. "Injuns?"

"Sure, plenty of signs, but I haven't seen any bucks myself. As soon as I discovered what had happened at the Crossing I struck out on to the plateau, and came around that way to warn those fellows at Low Water. But when I got sight of that station from off the bluffs yonder it had been wiped out. Then I thought about this stage going west today, and came on to meet you. Must have ridden a hundred or twenty miles since yesterday; the Mustang is all in."

Moylan stuck his head out the nearest window.

"Look like they had much of a fight at the Crossing?" he asked.

"Not much; more like a night raid; two whites killed, and scalped. The third man either was taken away, or his body got burnt in the building. Horses all gone."

"What tribe?"

"Arapahoes, from the way they scalped; that's what made it so serious—if those Northern Indians have broken loose there is going to be war this time for sure."

The men on the box looked at each other questioningly.

"I don't see no use tryin' to go on, Jake, do you?" asked the driver soberly. "Even if we do git through, thar ain't no hosses to be had."

The other shook his head, rubbing his gun-stock.

"Most likely those same red devils are layin' for us now somewhere between yere an' Low Water; whar the trail runs in between them two big rocks, most probable," he concluded. "Not havin' no ha'r to lose, I'm fer goin' back."

With an oath of relief, the driver released his brake and skillfully swung the leaders around, the coach groaning as it took the sharp turn. The man on the ground caught a swiftly passing glimpse of the young woman's face within, and strode hurriedly forward as the coach started.

"Hold on there, pardner," he commanded sternly. "This poor bronc won't travel another mile. There's plenty of room for me inside, and I'll turn the tired devil loose. Hold on, I say!"

The driver once again slapped on the brake, growling and reluctant, his anxious eyes searching the trail in both directions. Hamlin quietly uncinched his saddle, flinging it to the coach roof; the bride followed, and then, with a slap on the haunch of the released animal, he strode to the stage door, thrust his Henry rifle within, and took the vacant seat beside Gonzales. With a sudden crack of the driver's whip the four horses leaped forward, and the coach careened on the slope of the trail, causing the passengers to clutch wildly to keep from being precipitated into a mass on the floor. As the traces straightened, Miss Molly, clinging desperately to a strap, caught her first fair glance at the newcomer. His hat was tilted back, the light revealing lines of weariness and a coating of the gray, powdery dust of the alkali desert, but beneath it appeared the brown, sun-scorched skin, while the gray eyes looking straight at her, were resolute and smiling. His rough shirt, open at the throat, might have been the product of any sutler's counter; he wore no jacket, and the broad yellow stripe down the leg of the faded blue trousers alone proclaimed him a soldier. He smiled across at her, and she lowered her eyes, while his glance wandered on toward the others.

"Don't seem to be very crowded today," he began, genially addressing Moylan. "Not an extremely popular route at present, I reckon. Mining, pardner?"

"No; post-trader at Fort Marcy."

"Oh, that's it," his eyebrows lifting slightly. "This Indian business is a bad job for you then." His eyes fell on his seatmate. "Well, if this isn't little Gonzales!—You've got a good ways from home."

"Si, senor!" returned the Mexican brokenly. "I tink I not remem."

"No, I reckon not. I'm not one of your class; cards and I never did agree. I shot up your game once down at Union; night Hassinger was killed. Remember now, don't you?"

"Si, senor," spreading his hands. "It was mos' unfortunate."

"Would have been more so, if the boys had got hold of you—Saint Anne! but that fellow on the box is driving some."

The thud of the horses' feet under the lash, coupled with the reckless lurching of the coach, ended all further attempt at conversation, and the four passengers held on grimly, and stared out of the windows, as if expecting every instant that some accident would hurl them headlong. The frightened driver was apparently sparing neither whip nor tongue, the galloping teams jerking the stage after them in a mad race up the trail. Hamlin thrust his head out of the nearest window, but a sudden lurch hurled him back, the coach taking a sharp curve on two wheels, and coming down level once again with a bump which brought the whole four together. The little Mexican started to scream out a Spanish oath, but Hamlin gripped his throat before it was half uttered, while Moylan pressed the girl back into her seat, bracing himself to hold her firm.

"What the devil—" he began angrily, and then the careening coach stopped as suddenly as though it had struck the bank, again tearing loose their handhold on the seats and flinging them headlong. They heard the creaking clump of the brakes, the dancing of frightened horses, a perfect volley of oaths, the crunch of feet as men leaped from the top to the ground; then, all at once, the stage lurched forward, swerving sharply to the left, and struck out across the flat directly toward the bluff.

Hamlin struggled to the nearest window, and, grasping the sill to hold himself upright, leaped out. He caught a momentary glimpse of two men riding swiftly on the trail; the box above was empty, the wheelers alone remained in harness, and they were running uncontrolled.

"By God!" he muttered. "Those two damn cowards have cut loose and left us!"

Even as the unrestrained words leaped from his lips he realized the only hope—the reins still dangled, caught securely in the brake lever. Inch by inch, foot by foot, he wiggled out; Moylan, comprehending, caught his legs, holding him steady against the mad pitching. His fingers gripped the iron top rail, and, exerting all his strength, he slowly pulled his body up, until he fell forward into the driver's seat. Swift as he had been, the action was not quickly enough conceived to avert disaster. He had the reins in his grip when the swinging pole struck the steep side of the bluff, snapping off with a sharp crack, and flinging down the frightened animals, the wheels crashing against them, as the coach came to a sudden halt. Hamlin hung on grimly, flung forward to the footrail by the force of the shock, his body bruised and aching. One horse lay motionless, head under, apparently instantly killed; his mate struggled to his feet, tore frantically loose from the traces, and went flying madly down the slope, the broken harness dangling at his heels. The Sergeant sat up and stared about, sweeping the blood from a slight gash out of his eyes. Then he came to himself with a gasp—understanding instantly what it all meant, why those men had cut loose the horses and ridden away, why the wheelers had plunged forward in that mad run-away race—between the bluffs and the river a swarm of Indians were lashing their ponies, spreading out like the sticks of a fan.

"There is Hell to Pay West of Here."

FRIBBLES OF FASHION.

Double Skirt Extremely Fashionable For Street Costume.

Where the ordinary walking coat and skirt are concerned the double skirt is immensely fashionable, the upper one being sometimes buttoned down the front like the coat, so as almost to suggest a deep basque. The favorite material is a thick ribbed cloth or velvet, either of which suggests the ordinary corduroy, and in mole and gray, black or dark corbeau blue this makes the most attractive of costumes.

The draped bodice is good style this season, and the one pictured is very graceful and becoming to a slight figure.

SUBURBAN TRUCK GARDENING TO BE A RESULT OF PARCEL POST

Representative Tells How Farmers' Profits Are Made Greater.

A CONDITION that allows the farmers of the country to get but $6,000,000 for what finally sold to the consumers for about $13,000,000 is directly attacked by the new parcel post service. As to the manner in which farm profits are increased and prices to consumers reduced by the service, Representative David J. Lewis of Maryland has given an interesting review, in part as follows:

"The mere articulation of the farm and countryside with the town and railways by the postal van will be of very great social importance. It will lead to a new industry—the suburban gardener. He will be able to send his shipments to his patrons direct at cost of service, and the economic barrier of an individual transportation system is removed. Four acres and independence has been a dream of the past. It is apparent that it may become a fact through the postal van. And what a fact! Shifting the unwholesome tendency of population to the nickelodeon civilization of the cities back to the country. As the president has stated, the high cost of living was bound up in this postal legislation. Two dozen eggs, a dressed fowl, three pounds of butter, a like amount of country sausage, a country cured ham and a half bushel of apples sold recently at a farm near Washington at $2.85, but when they got to the consumer the cost was $5.55. Give the small shipment its transportation rights and the means have been provided by which the prudent and husbanding spirit of the workers of our country can give themselves a measure of relief.

"There is considerable objection to the parcel post in this country. It comes from men who make their objections with an earnestness and spirit that should cause one to halt and consider. I mean the local merchants. They ask 'Why make the limit from four to eleven pounds in weight? Is not this limit obviously designed to be just large enough to get his patron away from him to the mail order house and yet so small as to exclude the local merchant, since he commonly ships in larger weights?' This objection was largely overcome with the substitution of the zone system for the flat rate proposition. The rates should not create unnatural markets by ignoring distance. The flat rate idea represents a misapplication of the principle of negligible costs in rate making. It is rightly applied to letters, because the element of transportation cost with them is less than one-fourth of the total cost. But where weight is involved to any extent the transportation cost is not negligible, and even in the smallest countries, like Switzerland and Belgium, the rates recognize distance.

Connects Farmers With Outside World.

"Some 40,000,000 of our people, the producers of vital necessities, live in the country, off the railway lines. The express companies, of course, and the railways, too, have no means of reaching this country population. Any system at all adequate to directly connect the producer and consumer, especially with reference to vital necessities, will have to connect the farmer with the railways and the towns. Only the postal system possesses the agency for that purpose. It possesses it in the rural free delivery structure, now almost complete and ready for adaptation to the larger service. We are spending over $40,000,000 on that service, and it is waiting, one might say, with empty wagons to receive and convey in retail quantities the necessities of life from the farmer in the country to the hungry mouths that need them in the city. The express company, therefore, is excluded as the remedy to connect producer and consumer for two main reasons—its rates are prohibitive and its instrumentalities do not reach the farm. The computation of the outlay the postoffice department will have to make for this increased service can only take place as the development of the traffic proceeds. The simplified and reliable motor truck is now in sight. No abrupt change will take place, and the postal department will gradually adapt the rural delivery structure to meet the needs of the traffic as they become manifest.

"The postal system of the United States is certainly the most efficient agency of its kind throughout the world. I have divided the number of postal employees in England, France and Germany into the number of mail pieces handled each year and then made a like division for the United States. The result shows that for the year 1908 the efficiency of the average employee in England was 31,117 pieces handled, in France 38,241, in Germany 25,901 and in the United States 51,591. We certainly have the most efficient postal agency to handle the small shipments."

The new act naturally made necessary big appropriations for equipment of the various cities. It is worthy of note that Chicago has received attention as being the most important parcel post center in the country. That city has received an apportionment of $15,000 for the rental of automobiles and other er vehicles for the delivery of parcels. Beyond doubt, Chicago will receive the largest volume of business in the new service of any city. New York, Boston and Philadelphia have received appropriations of $10,000 each for parcel delivery.

The Parcel Post "Hospital."

Another feature upon which postoffice department officials are putting much thought is the "parcel post hospital," to correspond to the dead letter office. One example of an office in London is cited. A clerk had sixty-one loose address labels and these were the articles which had lost their addresses: Ten geese, nine ducks, six rabbits, four dolls, six boxes of cigars, one tin trumpet, one ostrich feather, two powder puffs, one toy locomotive, three jars of jam, one plum cake, one plum pudding, one wheelbarrow, one seed cake, one bottle of gin and two bottles of whisky—fifty articles and sixty-one labels.

All trouble might have been avoided had the public packed their articles intelligently.

Express Rates to Be Changed.

The express companies are meeting the rates in effect under the parcel post law. They will compete for the parcels that come within the scope of the Bourne act. It is the purpose of the express people to try to hold their business in the towns and cities. They cannot deliver their parcels in the rural districts.

If the express companies cut their rates to compete with the parcel post law, starting with New York as a central point or basis, the following reductions must be made: From 26 cents on a one, two or three pound package, within fifty miles of New York, to 5, 8 or 11 cents; from 30 cents on a four or five pound package to 14 or 17 cents, and from 35 cents on a six, seven, eight, nine, ten or eleven pound package to 20, 23, 26, 29, 32 or 35 cents.

Six pounds, about the medium weight for a parcel, will be carried by the postoffice department 50 miles for 20 cents, 100 for 26, 200 or 300 for 32, 400 or 500 or 600 for 38 cents and 1,000 for 44. For the same service the express companies would charge: One hundred miles for 35 cents, 200 for 45, 300 or 400 miles for 50, 500 miles for 55, 600 miles for 60, 700 or 800 or 900 for 70 and 1,000 for 80.

The parcel post package cannot weigh more than eleven pounds, but one can send sixty-six pounds in six packages fifty miles for $2.20, for which the express companies charge $3.05. A comparison of aggregates shows that the express companies charge $51.50 for what the parcel post will charge $38.28. The parcel post rate reduction from the present express charges is 25.67 per cent.

In order to meet the competition better the express companies will increase their delivery force and employ the most modern equipment. The contest is to be spirited.

PLAY GIVEN AFTER MIDNIGHT.

Stage Society Outwits Police and Sunday Law.

Shortly before midnight recently automobiles began to arrive in front of the Lyceum theater in New York and discharge men and women in evening dress. Soon all the orchestra seats in the theater were occupied, and the curtain then rose for the start of a dramatic performance.

It was the first production of the Stage Society of New York, and the performance was held after midnight because the police had threatened to arrest all concerned in the play, planned for a week earlier, if it were given on Sunday. There was no police interference, although Inspector Dwyer was in the audience and the society had on hand a city magistrate, who is a member of the organization. He was said to be there to accept bail if there were any arrests.

Among those who were in the audience were leaders in the theatrical profession, in the operatic field, in arts and letters and society. The object of the organization is to produce plays by new authors and such as might not be readily accepted for production by the theatrical managers.

The members of the organization were jubilant at the success of their venture, at the crowded house and the presence of so many persons whose attendance meant influence for the society. There was a good deal of jesting heard at the expense of the police, and it appeared that the members felt that they had outwitted them.

Three one act plays were given, and the performance, beginning promptly at 12:15 a. m., as was promised, lasted well into the morning. The hour was a test of faith in the principle, but it was met pretty well.

WILL MEND LIBERTY BELL.

Famous Object to Be Taken to Panama-Pacific Exposition.

The two mile petition of 500,000 school children of California presented to Mayor Blankenburg and the city council of Philadelphia by Mrs. Emma Doane of San Francisco having been granted, the historic Liberty bell will again take a journey from Independence hall. It will go clear across the continent, 3,000 miles, to San Francisco for the Panama-Pacific exposition in 1915. The bell has made six trips from Independence hall on missions of patriotism and instruction. It went to the Cotton exposition at New Orleans

BIG PETITION AND LIBERTY BELL.

In 1885, to the Columbian exposition at Chicago in 1893, to the Interstate and West Indian exposition at Charleston in 1902, to the celebration of the one hundred and twenty-eighth anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill, Boston, in 1903, and to the St. Louis exposition in 1904.

Mayor Blankenburg has engaged Frederick W. Taylor, a consulting engineer of Chestnut Hill, to repair the Liberty bell so that it may make the trip to the Panama-Pacific exposition.

Mr. Taylor has devised an internal structure of steel and wood which will remove the dead weight strain that is rapidly lengthening the crack and pulling the historic bell asunder. He has assured the city authorities that there is little danger in the operation and that there will be no unsightly blotches or apparatus visible.

WILL DESIGN NEW CURRENCY.

Kenyon Cox, New York Artist, Receives Commission.

Secretary MacVeagh of the treasury department has engaged Kenyon Cox, a New York artist, to design the back of the new American currency notes. This design on the back will be the same for all denominations of all classes of notes—United States notes, coin certificates and national bank notes. By adopting only one design for the back Mr. MacVeagh believes that this feature of the currency can be given over to art, permitting changes and improvements to be easily made. Mr. Cox has submitted to the secretary the general features of the design he contemplates, and these were tentatively approved. The design is symbolic of progress and peace, showing the development of the nation in the lines of labor and commerce.

The new currency will be two-thirds the size of that now in circulation, its dimensions being 6 by 2 1/2 inches.

Secretary MacVeagh expects to give the order for printing the new notes to Director Ralph of the bureau of engraving and printing about Feb. 15, at most at the end of his administration. It will require eighteen months to accomplish the change, which consequently will not be consummated until well along in President Wilson's term of office.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

WALKING.

I have just read two human documents of value. One is by Frederic Harrison, the author, aged eighty-one, and the other by Lord Strathmore, ninety-two years of age.

These young old men, both active and hearty, give some golden rules concerning health, and both lay especial emphasis on the benefits of walking as an exercise.

Harrison says every one should walk at the least two hours each day.

Why walk?

Well, in the first place, walking raises the temperature of the body. It is like putting fuel in the furnace and opening the draft. There's something doing inside. Waste is being carried off.

You breathe deeply.

And that is important. Most persons use only half their lungs, ordinarily, for breathing purposes. Deep breathing puts large quantities of oxygen into the blood. Muscle and nerve get their vitality from the blood. Besides, in deep breathing waste is carried off by exhalation.

And there's the skin.

Millions of pores are opened up by the perspiration, and waste material is eliminated.

And digestion:

Walking helps that important function. The exercise puts an edge on appetite. And good digestion waits on appetite.

Moreover—

Here is an important item seldom considered, but of great importance. The doctors will tell you about the diaphragm. The diaphragm is a sort of movable stage floor between the chest and the abdomen. It is raised or lowered by the contraction and swelling of the lungs.

Now:

When the lungs are deeply filled by walking the diaphragm goes down and presses upon the liver and stomach and spleen. It is like a massage of these organs and keeps them in good order.

The best way to stir up your liver is to stir your legs.

And, moreover—

Nothing is here said of the mental benefits of walking, the exhilaration of the open air, the joy of well lubricated movement.

Habituate your legs.

LOCAL WIRELESS STATIONS

Under Federal Supervision by Law
Now in Force.

The law enacted by the Congress placing all wireless telegraph stations of the United States under government control, and to be enforced by the department of commerce and labor, is now in effect.

The amateur stations in this city come within the law which also provides that the operators must be licensed. The object of the new measure is to keep the government in touch with all wireless stations, no matter how small it may be.

The law will be enforced by the radio division of the bureau of navigation, and will affect some four hundred wireless equipped American ships, about one hundred commercial land stations and many more stations connected with schools and colleges; also experimental laboratories and several thousand amateur stations.

The act establishes a complete federal control system over radio communication and requires licensing of all wireless operators working across state lines or in communication with ships at sea. It is, therefore, important that all persons using or contemplating the use of wireless telegraphy should familiarize themselves with the requirements of the act.

The United States has been divided into nine districts. The states of Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan (upper peninsula), Minnesota, Kentucky, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota and North Dakota constitute the Ninth district with headquarters at Chicago.

Women will be eligible as operators. Examinations for operators will be held at certain naval yards, army posts and elsewhere.

The radio inspector may be addressed at Room 850, Federal building, Chicago, and all those concerned in radio communication and coming under the act should apply at once to him for information and instruction that they may not subject themselves to the penalties attaching to nonconformity with the law.

SORROW AND PAIN.

However well and happy and successful we may be, sorrow and pain are never far away, and the world pain is everywhere, and there is no peace or joy for us at any time if we cannot feel that in and through and over all the sickness, sorrow, pain and loss and shame and sin there is the eternal goodness.—John W. Chadwick.

Ends Hunt For Rich Girl.

Often the hunt for a rich wife ends when the man meets a woman that uses Electric Bitters. Her strong nerves tell in a bright brain and even temper. Her peach-bloom complexion and ruby lips result from her pure blood; her bright eyes from restful sleep; her elastic step from firm, free muscles, all telling of the health and strength Electric Bitters give a woman, and the freedom from indigestion, backache, headache, fainting and dizzy spells they promote. Everywhere they are woman's favorite remedy. If weak or ailing try them. 50c at The Andrews Drug Co., Seymour, Ind. Advertisement.

OFFICER IS RECOVERING.

Mitchell Marshal Shot Three Times While Making Arrest.

Town Marshal Walker who was shot three times Friday night while arresting Guy Gowens, is recovering and no serious results from the wounds are expected. The man had been making a disturbance just outside the Lehigh Chapel while an entertainment was in progress. He fired a gun into the air several times and when the officer started to arrest him he fired the bullets into his body.

The man who made the trouble was fined for disturbing a meeting, and later he may be required to stand trial upon a charge of attempt to murder. It is said at Mitchell that Gowens refused to tell where he lived, but it has been found that he is either from this county or Missouri. The officers are not sure that he had given his right name.

Makes the Nation Gasp.

The awful list of injuries on a Fourth of July staggers humanity. Set over against it, however, is the wonderful healing, by Bucklen's Arnica Salve, of thousands, who suffered from burns, cuts, bruises, bullet wounds or explosions. Its the quick healer of boils, ulcers, eczema, sore lips or piles. 25c at The Andrews Drug Co., Seymour, Ind.
